Goodwill to help Hope Haven

Goodwill Industries, the largest employer of disabled adults on the Gulf Coast, has renewed its cooperative effort with Hope Haven.

The Bay St. Louis store has been accepting donations from Hope Haven supporters for the last year and issuing an "in-store credit" to Hope Haven for donations received.

Bob Campbell, Goodwill's used clothing director, has approved a continuation of this "partnership" for the coming year.

"This cooperative effort is very important to our shelter," said Terry Latham, Hope Haven director. "We do not have storage for the hundreds of articles of clothing people wish to donate to us, but we do need clothing for the children we serve."

"Giving to Goodwill allows us to shop for the specific children who are in need of clothing for their shelter and we can give them what they need, and we get the clothing for free, and Goodwill benefits from the additional donations."

"It's just a winning way to help abused children and the disabled, and I urge everyone to drop off any unwanted clothing to the store in Bay St. Louis and let them know it's for the benefit of Hope Haven."

"I also urge everyone to support Goodwill Industries — they use the donated goods to hire and train and rehabilitate many injured and disabled people who might otherwise have to rely on public assistance."

Delegates needed to work for state youth, hear Colin Powell

General Colin Powell, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, will address delegates to the statewide Summit for Mississippi's Future, scheduled Nov. 4-5 in Jackson. The summit will bring together 1,000 delegates from 100 Mississippi towns and counties.

Hancock County will send 10 delegates. Invited to serve as conveners and choose delegates for Hancock County are Chancery Clerk Tim Kellar, Superintendent of Education Terrell Randolph, and Geraldine Lang, Save Our Children, Bay St. Louis.

Powell comes to Mississippi in his new role as leader of a nationwide volunteer effort that seeks to provide five important resources to American young people. He will help launch an unprecedented three-year effort to bring new resources to 20,000 young people in the state. As chairman of America's Promise, the Alliance for Youth, Powell coordinates efforts growing from the President's Summit on Volunteer Service held last April in Philadelphia, Pa.

"Every day I see many reasons to believe that, by working with you and others, we will turn the tide for America's children and young people," said Powell. "In the process, all Americans will begin to feel a new and profound faith and hope in America's future."

Powell will work with delegates, who are all volunteers, as they begin work on action plans to jumpstart efforts on behalf of young people in every area of the state. They will seek ways to provide five important resources to an additional 20,000 young people in the state by the end of the year 2000: a caring relationship with an adult mentor; safe, structured after-school activities; a healthy start; a marketable skill; and an opportunity to give back through community service.

Delegates will also help produce a Promise Book of new, three-year commitments to Mississippi young people by businesses, non-profits, civic organizations and individuals. To receive Promise Book information, write Summit for Mississippi's Future, 3825 Ridgewood Road, Suite 601, Jackson, MS 39211.

Also participating in the Summit are Governor Kirk Fordice and Pat Fordice, honorary chairs; and Mississippi's four former governors Bill Allain, Ray Mabus, Bill Waller and William Winter, co-chairs. Coordinating Summit preparations is the Mississippi Commission for Volunteer Service.

Summit participants were chosen by broad-based community groups convened in every part of the state. They have committed to work over the next three years to make the plans a reality. Size of delegations is based on population, using a formula that gives every group at least five delegates.

Anyone interested in serving as a delegate, contact the conveners or call 1-888-353-1793.

Supers refuse school board's request to withdraw from land battle case with Port & Harbor

BY ED LEPOMA

Hancock County supervisors have refused to withdraw from a land-grab battle going on between the School District and the Port and Harbor Commission.

The latest appeal to back off came at the Board's meeting Monday from School Supt. Terry Randolph. Some weeks ago, the Hancock County School District asked supervisors to withdraw a challenge that the P&H plans to take all the way to the state Supreme Court. At that time, supervisors merely acknowledged the resolution, but made no comment and took no action on the request.

With an eminent domain hearing scheduled for next Monday, Randolph indicated he would feel better about the outcome of the pending court hearing if supervisors would "withdraw their appeal to the Supreme Court."

Randolph said if the School District abandoned its plans to build a new middle school on a 20-acre site north of the present high school and Stennis Airport, "We would have to spend quite a bit more. We can't do anything else but utilize that particular site," he said.

The School District has set aside $9 million of a $20 million school bond issue approved by voters last May to build the new school. Randolph said the new school could be built for that price because students could share athletic facilities, sewerage and water systems already in place and would save on transporting students.

P&H officials said putting another school so close to Stennis would endanger the lives of students, and it would also serve to stifle future growth of the county's only airport.

"Everyone knew as much as a year ago that we planned to put the middle school there," Randolph contended. He said the opposition to the site arose only two to three months ago.

P&H Commissioner Louis Hall was in the audience and contended, "Terry knew about our opposition before the bond issue, but we did not want to interfere with the bond issue. We supported the bond issue one hundred percent. But, he should have had Plan B somewhere."

P&H Executive Director Hal Walters said his main concern was for the safety of the students, but state Economic Development officials have told him they are finding it more difficult to provide funding for the airport's growth if another school is built so close by the airport. Walters offered, "Let's try to find money for another location."

Randolph disagreed on the danger of the location. "The FAA says it's (the high school) in the safest location it possible could be," said Randolph. "We never wanted to put students in danger. You never hear about a plane crashing into a terminal," Randolph said.

Board President Phillip Moran said putting the Vocational Tech Center and the high school next to Stennis was "a mistake."

He appealed to the opposing factions "to regroup, and settle on one site across from Hwy. 603."

District 1 Supervisor, who served on the P&H Commission before being elected to the Board, reminded Randolph, "Everything that comes into Port Bienville of Stennis Airport benefits means tax dollars for schools."

"I sincerely wish they (the School Board) would look somewhere else," said Ladner.

The eminent domain proceedings are scheduled to begin in Hancock County Circuit Court Monday, and the land grab is also being opposed by two property owners.

Meanwhile, the Board of Supervisors and the P&H have asked the state Supreme Court to overturn an August ruling by Judge John Whitfield that gives the School District first digs to the property.

The state's highest court would be asked to rule which agency would have the "superior right" to the property. No hearing date has been set on that appeal.

Board searches for ways to leash canine problem

BY ED LEPOMA

Hancock County supervisors plan to take a harder look at the escalating problem of dogs running wild in the county.

The promise was made after the grandfather of a child, who was bitten by a stray dog last week, pleaded for passage of a countywide leash law. But, G.W. Graham, said, "The shelter is pitiful. It's a mess." He said a larger shelter is needed, along with another animal control officer for the county.

Graham told supervisors that his two-and-a-half-year-old granddaughter, Rikki, required 140 stitches after she was attacked by a stray dog that wandered into the unfenced yard at the family's mobile home on Lower Bay Road.

"I am upset," said Graham. He said the stray and treatment at Hancock Medical Center cost $8,000, plus the family went through some anxious moments waiting to see whether Rikki would be required to take a series of painful inoculations to ward off rabies.

Graham said he didn't blame the sheriff or the dog catcher. He said the problem is that the shelter is always overcrowded, and the animal control officer can't pick up stray or vicious dogs because there is no room to hold them. By law, the shelter is required to try to notify owners of animals that have been impounded and must keep the animals five days before they can euthanize them.

Sheriff Ronnie Peterson sympathized with Graham. "It's a sad situation that happened out there," said Peterson. "But, we need a countywide leash law."

Peterson said the county only has one animal control officer to patrol the whole county, but agreed that a larger shelter would be needed if more dogs are impounded.

Board President Phillip Moran said the situation is another prime example that "the county is outgrowing facilities built years ago."

Sonny Taylor, who investigates cruelty and abuse charges for the Hancock County Humane Society, said he had to fight supervisors "tooth and nail" to get a leash law passed in 1990, but they agreed to put it into effect only south of the Interstate.

"Animals are gradually but surely taking over the county," said Taylor. He said a countywide leash law could be enacted that would exempt hunting dogs, but agreed a larger shelter and another enforcement officer would be needed.

"It (a leash law) won't do any good if you don't have a place to put them," said Taylor.

Based on statistics that showed 64.2 percent of the animals impounded came from the unincorporated areas of the county, supervisors this year raised funding for the Waveland Animal Shelter from $33,000 to $45,900.

However, the shelter on Gulf Side Street, was built in 1984, and only has room for 21 dogs and 18 cats on a daily basis.

Supervisors want a workshop session with the Sheriff, Humane Society officials, Animal Shelter employees, and others, but set no specific date.

Math and Science Summit to be held at Stennis

The first "Gulf Coast Math and Science Summit," sponsored by the U.S. Department of Education and NASA will be held at the John C. Stennis Space Center Tuesday, Oct. 14.

Local residents and educators are invited to attend the summit, which will be held from 8 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. in the Visitors Center auditorium. Educational leaders will meet to discuss plans for two new education initiatives, which will affect the quality of education for children along the Mississippi Gulf Coast, across the state of Mississippi and in St. Tammany Parish. These initiatives will be announced during the summit.

The day will include time for practitioners to interact with national, state and local representatives who will discuss curriculum issues, technology applications and math performance and learning objectives. The summit will provide a unique opportunity for participants to consult with these experts to solicit ideas and strategies for consideration and implementation within school districts.

The Math and Science Summit will also feature a review of the results of the Third International Math and Science Study, or TIMSS, and how Mississippi students ranked when compared to students in other areas of the United States.

The summit will also explore strategies for improving performance among all students.

A registration fee of $25, payable to Johnson Control World Services, is required to cover materials and meals, a continental breakfast and lunch, for the day. This fee can be paid during registration on the morning of the summit.

"CUEVAS' QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

Jane and I got to see a new area of the country last week. We visited Maine, Vermont, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and New York.

One has to see the fall foliage in person to really appreciate the beauty of nature. We hit the peak season for colors in Vermont and New Hampshire and also Lake Placid, N.Y. In the other areas, some of the trees just began to change.

There were 54 in our Hancock Bank Classic Club group from along the Mississippi Coast, including five who were from the Baton Rouge area.

An employee at the Hilton Resort in Lake Placid said he has been in the area for 15 years, and this was the best year for colors he had seen since he has been there.

We visited a lot of interesting places with temperatures from short sleeves to snow flurries.

Unless someone is allergic to seafood, have have a lobster bake with clams at Bar Harbor, Maine.

Also see the vacation home of President George Bush at Kennebunkport.

We visited Acadia National Park in Maine and the beautiful rugged shorelines of the state.

In New Hampshire's White Mountains there was snow in the higher elevations, and we even witnessed snow flurries as we rode a Wildcat Mountain gondola. Skiers were already on skis in the White Mountains.

We visited the city of Hanover, home of the famous Dartmouth College.

We toured New York's Fort Ticonderoga at Lake Champlain, the Adirondack Mountains, and at Lake Placid the Olympic Arena and Convention Center.

One of the most interesting visits was to Norman Rockwell's Studio and Museum. Many of you can remember his so many covers for the Post magazine.

On our last day we visited the Boston Harbor and the Boston Tea Party Ship, the home of Paul Revere, and visited the Quincy Market Place, (prices were very high at the market).

A highlight of the last day was a visit to the Naval Yard and walking around the deck of the U.S. Constitution. Who knows, we may have seen some of the oak on the ship from the Ulman Avenue and Beach Boulevard tree.

It is reported that some 90 percent of the original timbers of the 200-year-old battleship have been replaced. During our eight days we visited many other places of interest.

As I have mentioned before, it is always good to get away for a few days. After five or six days, I am ready to come home.

Among the observations I made of the New England States, especially in Maine, Massachusetts, Vermont and New Hampshire, there just isn't any litter along the roads.

Halloween decorations were all over the place, at residences and businesses.

The majority of hotels and motels in Maine are closed by the end of October and will not open to about Mother's Day. It is just too cold.

Most motels and hotels in the ski areas stay open throughout the winter.

By the way, I take our residents any day over those in New England. The folks up there are just not friendly at all.

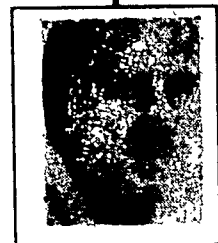

We live in a great part of the country, and each and everyone of us should be very thankful.

There is no place like Hancock County and the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

EYES ON MISSISSIPPI

By Bill Minor

Bill Faulkner's party a black-tie affair

Good ole Bill Faulkner would have been most ill-at-ease and uncomfortable if he had been present here the other night amidst us black-tied folks sipping wine and munching good food to observe his 100th birthday.

Certainly Faulkner's usual apparel was anything but black-tie formal wear. Two of the three times I had the chance to be in his presence he was wearing his staple—a well-worn tweed jacket with elbow patches. On the third occasion he was almost natty, in tie and beige linen jacket.

The bronze statue of Faulkner dedicated on the front lawn of the redstone Oxford City Hall here last week, pipe in hand, seated on a park bench around the courthouse Square, probably is the way this humble man would best like to be remembered. (Even controversy surrounded where the statue would go, finally winding up at City Hall.)

His days as a habitué of the Square were when locals used to refer to Faulkner as "Count-No-Count" because of his regal appearance while apparently impecunious. Little, of course, could they have known, that one of the world's most renowned literary figures was in their midst.

Near the Square was where I first had the privilege of meeting Faulkner personally. It was back in October, 1949, when I, as a 27-year-old correspondent for the New Orleans Times-Picayune, went to Oxford to cover the premiere of the movie "Intruder in the Dust," taken from his novel. On the afternoon of the movie showing we press people, along with local dignitaries and the Hollywood movie types were all enjoying a cocktail party at the old Mansion Restaurant close to the Square.

Everyone was wondering if Faulkner would even show up for the movie, since he had not been seen for three days. Quietly, Faulkner suddenly slipped into the cocktail party, wearing several days' growth of beard, in his worn elbow-patched jacket under which he wore a t-shirt.

When I introduced myself as being from The Times-Picayune, he immediately asked about my editor in New Orleans, George Healy, who as an Ole Miss student in the 1920s had been one of Faulkner's bridge-playing cronies during Faulkner's disastrous stint as the University postmaster.

Sailing had become Faulkner's new hobby, and he inquired of me where he could get nylon sails in New Orleans for his small sailboat kept at nearby Sardis Reservoir. I was able to help him and established immediate rapport.

The next time I saw Faulkner was in May, 1962 when he made an unlikely appearance at the annual meeting of Delta Council in Cleveland, the big soiree to which plantation owners and the state's politicians flocked. This was the time he showed up in the natty jacket and tie.

His speech, which he had written in longhand, is memorable, because it was scarcely heard by anyone beyond the front few rows as he read it in his soft, Southern drawl.

What struck me was that Delta whites, who likely detested everything Faulkner had written about a decadent Mississippi society, felt obligated to come hear, pretend to listen, then applaud, a Nobel laureate.

Unforgettable was my last time to talk personally with Faulkner, on a cold December evening in 1958 during a visit to his home, Rowan Oak. For two hours we conversed about Mississippi while sipping bourbon as he fed a roaring fire.

His good friend (also my friend), Dr. Jim Silver, the flamboyant, controversial Ole Miss professor, had taken me to visit Faulkner at my request. Silver rapped on the writer's front door and summoned him: "Uncle Bill, come on down and open up."

My reason for wanting to see Faulkner was that Newsweek, for which I served as Mississippi's "stringer," called me desperately wanting to ask Faulkner one simple question: Was he coming to New York the following week for the opening of the play "Requiem for a Nun," based on his short story. Silver made me swear I wouldn't ask Faulkner about his writing or take any notes.

It turned out Faulkner liked to talk about Mississippi politics and he was delighted I could give him an earful. I recall he even spoke about the day when Ole Miss would have to accept black students and he speculated, almost presciently, that the trouble would come from a mob of outsiders streaming onto the campus.

As we were leaving and he saw us out, I popped the simple question of whether he was going to New York for the play opening. "Naw," he said, "I don't think so." Outside, Jim Silver fumed that I'd ask him that simple question.

A few years later when Silver was writing his controversial book, "Mississippi: The Closed Society," I more than repaid him by furnishing him information and some documents he badly needed.

My recollections of that memorable evening with Faulkner at Rowan Oak invariably go back to thoughts of how this great man of literature spoke so softly, almost effeminately, that you had to listen closely to hear him. And he used only simple, two-syllable words. Always it makes me realize that genius can come from some surprising places,

More Closed Captioned TV Will Result from New Rules

By the Federal Communications Commission

There soon will be a dramatic increase in the amount of closed captioned video programming available to the more than 22 million Americans with hearing disabilities.

This was assured after the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) established rules to meet the requirements of the Telecommunications Act of 1996, requiring the Commission to adopt rules and schedules for captioning of video programming ensuring access by persons with hearing disabilities.

Congress generally required that video programming be closed captioned, regardless of distribution technology — broadcast, cable, direct broadcast satellite — to ensure access to persons with hearing disabilities.

Some classes of programs or services for which provision of video programming would be economically burdensome are exempt under the new rules.

Some of the key elements in the rules include:

■ New video programming first published or exhibited on or after January 1, 1998, is to be "fully accessible."

The rules establish an eight-year transition period and define "full accessibility" as the closed captioning of 95 percent of nonexempt new programming.

Benchmarks to reach this will be staged in — approximately five hours of closed captioning per day after two years, 10 hours per day after four years and 15 hours per day after six years.

The Commission also will require video programming providers to continue to provide closed captioning at a level substantially the same as the average level of captioning that they provided during the first six months of 1997, even if the amount of captioned programming exceeds that required under the benchmarks.

■ The rules also provide that for programming first published or exhibited before January 1, 1998, at least 75 percent must contain closed captions at the end of a 10-year transition period.

■ The rules exempt several specific classes of closed captioning when such requirements would be economically burdensome.

These include: non-English language programs, programming late at night, promotional programming, public service announcements, certain locally produced and distributed programming, non-vocal musical programming and programming from new networks. Advertisements of five minutes or less are not included in the definition of programming.

Video programming distributors will be required to deliver intact the closed captioning they receive as part of the programming they distribute to viewers, where the captions do not require reformatting.

■ The rules will be enforced through a complaint process. Complaints alleging violation of the closed captioning rules must first be directed in writing to the video programming distributor responsible for distribution of the programming. If a video programming distributor fails to respond to a complaint or a dispute remains following this initial procedure, a complaint may then be filed with the Commission.

REFLECTIONS ON LIFE

By Father Jerome
LeDoux, SVD

"There is no life without death" is so true and yet so unpleasant a thought that we live in constant denial of it. All of us want life so badly that we want no part of any kind of death mixed with our furtherance and enjoyment of life.

Yet, we have no choice. If we do not accelerate the death of our cells through strenuous exercise, they will regenerate as weak, sickly cells. Our body responds to exercise by sending signals to our cells to become strong to meet the demand.

It sounds a bit gross, but, if we kill untold millions of our cells through exercise, the quality and durability of our entire body will be incredibly vibrant and enjoyable. Yes, we know. Doctors tell us this all the time.

Exercise!

About a hundred trillion cells are the building blocks of everything we are physically, whether bones, flesh, blood, hair, nails or skin. About 350 million of these cells are sacrificed routinely every day through ordinary activities.

What exercise does is kill many millions of cells beyond the 350 million which die through everyday muscle use. Distaste for exercise, inertia, complacency, procrastination and a raw repugnance for strain keep us away from exercise.

We certainly want the gain, but we have no stomach for the pain, the inconvenience, the annoyance of exercise. Easy Street, the easy life beckon to us constantly, drawing us with an amazing pull, even when we least suspect it.

Much more pleasant to be a couch potato, an armchair quarterback, a sedentary pursuer of the law of inertia, that axiom of physics: "A body at rest tends to remain at rest."

The key to overcoming our distaste for exercise is to start. When we get on a roll through proper exercise habits, we move into that other axiom of physics so necessary to our well-being: "A body in motion tends to remain in motion."

One would think that fear of cardiovascular disease, stroke, gimpy joints, hypertension, flaccid muscles and a general feeling of malaise would drive most people to exercise often and strenuously. Yet, that is seldom the case.

If the slavish fear of serious illness and even death does not motivate most of us to overcome inertia and begin taking exercise seriously, what will? Sadly, in most cases it is the onset of a crippling or terminal disability which moves us.

With strenuous physical exercise comes something even more unpleasant to most of us. No matter how good and regular, exercise will do us little good if we continue to feed dead or flawed food into the cells of our body.

That's right, unfortunately. The cooked food which smells so wonderful, tastes so great and puts our mind into such a good state is quite dead. Animal products of any kind, raw or cooked, are flawed food which jams our blood system.

The proof of the pudding is that people who abandoned the cooked food, animal products, sugar, salt and caffeine have been delivered from a long list of assorted body aches, weakness, infections and even terminal diseases.

Sandwiched between a good exercise regimen and proper rest, a mostly raw food regimen of vegetables and fruit has worked wonders on bodies by supplying live, high-octane fuel to the cells which then regenerate almost perfectly.

Young bodies thrive fairly well in spite of the cooked food and animal products they consume. Older bodies merely survive and eventually fall apart eating the same things.

Williams shines for Hancock

Darryel Williams, who sat out last week's game with an injured ankle, carried Hancock to a 35-7 victory over Oak Grove in a District 7, 4A game in Hattiesburg.

Williams ran for 198 of the Hawks' 512 total offensive yards, and scored two touchdowns. Freshman halfback Chris Goff had 70 yards and a touchdown.

"We haven't played a complete game yet," said Hancock coach Rocky Gaudin after his 14-ranked Hawks ran their record to 6-0. "We're happy to get (the win). (The record) is something to be proud of."

The Warriors racked up just 171 yards in offense.

Williams came on strong in the first quarter as he took a Josh Whitfield handoff and rumbled down the right side 85 yards for Hancock's first touchdown. Whitfield's PAT made it 7-0.

Hancock would score its next touchdown after it took possession on its 35-yard line after Oak Grove was stopped on fourth down. Nine minutes and 14 plays later, Whitfield danced his way into the end zone from one-yard out to put the Hawks on top, 14-0.

After failing on a pass attempt to halfback John Woods in the waning seconds of the first half, Whitfield threw a 35-yard scoring pass to Williams as time expired to give the Hawks a 21-0 halftime lead.

A fumble killed a drive early in the third quarter, but the Hawks defense got the ball back when Woods picked off a Ric Rancourt pass. Woods capped the drive with a three-yard run to give Hancock a 28-0 lead.

Hancock would put its final points on the board in the fourth quarter when Goff would bust up the middle from one yard out to make the score 35-0.

Oak Grove scored midway through the fourth quarter against Hancock's reserves on Rancourt's pass to Trey Hegan. Oak Grove recovered an onside kick, and drove to the Hawk nine before turning it over on downs.

Gaudin, who was forced to play without Lee Shirah and John Herron, said his team played a good game against a team whose record doesn't reflect its ability.

"We feel like we got some depth, but we're pushing it to the limit," he said. "Oak Grove looked pretty decent. They played good against Picayune."

Hancock will host Petal on Friday. Oak Grove is at St. Stanislaus.

SSC loses to Pearl River

BY JOSEPH W. GEX II

Pearl River Central repelled an error-prone St. Stanislaus Rock-a-chaw team for a 24-10 homecoming victory in Carriere on Friday night.

The Rocks came out on offense first and immediately fell behind. On the second play of the game, quarterback Wes Ehler dropped back to pass and was picked off by Zac Roies at the Rock 32-yard line. Roies returned it the distance for a touchdown. PRC quarterback Cody Anglin connected with Jeff Stockstill for the successful two-point conversion and the score was 8-0.

PRC's next scoring drive was set up when Roy Penton intercepted Rock freshman quarterback Jason Santiago.

Anglin went back to the air for a 31-yard strike to Jay Beech and a PRC first down inside the Rock 20 yardline.

The Blue Devils chewed up the yardage running the ball with Anglin carrying three straight times for moderate gains. Anglin scored from three yards out on his third carry of the series. Anglin hit Jarrod Dearman for the two-point conversion and the score 16-0.

The Rocks pulled things together and mounted a 14-play drive that resulted in Philippe Michel's 38-yard field goal that cut the PRC lead to 16-3.

Senior Rock running back Andy Brown gained seven yards on the first play. Next, Santiago went back to the air connecting with Knight for a 10 yard gain and a Rock first down.

Marc Whitfield gained 11 yards and a first down for the Blue Devils on their next possession. Two plays later, Anglin was picked off by Steven Knight at midfield and returned the ball to the PRC 15-yard line.

SSC missed a pass in the endzone and a penalty backed them up 10 yards before Coach Dave Kenson looked deep into his bag of tricks. Santiago hit Brandon Lewis for a short gain who lateraled to Brown coming out of the backfield for a 22-yard scoring run. The Rocks had to kick the PAT from the 25-yard line due to a penalty after the touchdown. Michel made good on the PAT and the score was 16-10.

The Blue Devils opened the second half on offense and after the touchback mounted a 22-play scoring drive that covered 80 yards.

On the final play of the drive, Anglin scored from seven yards out. Anglin hit Dearman for the two-point conversion and the score was 24-10.

But the Rocks attempted to rally. Santiago connected with Moses, who made the catch falling, for a 31-yard gain and a first down. Brown followed that with gains of seven and 10 yards and a first down.

After an incomplete pass, the Rocks went back to Brown who had gains of seven, one, three, and three yards before a fumble at the PRC three-yard line ended the drive.

Santiago later left the game with what looked like a serious injury to his wrist.

Kenson stated, "Mistakes. Mistakes. Mistakes. We played a good first half but when we made our mistakes they were at critical times. In the second half, if we score instead of

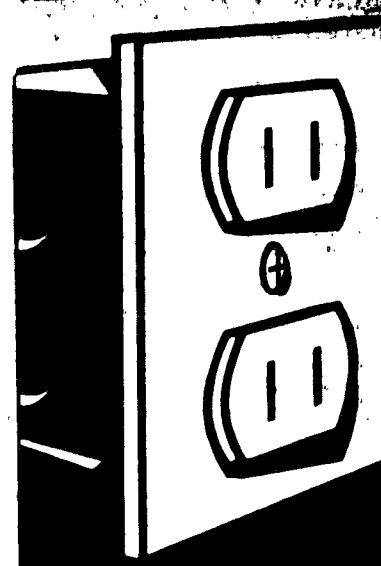

Pass loses

Raynoid Dedeaux scored on a 69-yard run and threw a scoring pass but it was not enough as Pass Christian dropped a 28-12 decision to District 8, 3-A rival Poplarville Friday night in Pass Christian.

Dedeaux's long scoring run came in the second quarter when the Pirates, 4-2, 1-1, fell behind 14-6.

After being outscored 21-6 in the third quarter, Dedeaux threw a 21-yard touchdown pass to Eran Landry in the fourth.

Dedeaux threw for 59 yards and the Pirates rushed for 130 yards, but lost three fumbles.

without political interference. An Authority could also eminent domain land.

The Echo asked Moran if he told the District about the land that supervisors were going after in the buffer zone, and Moran said District 3 Supervisor Lisa Cowand, who represents the Board on the three-member District, was involved in the negotiations.

The Echo then asked Moran, "Did you know that an Authority could eminent domain the land?"

Moran admitted, "Some mistakes were made. 'I guess, I blew it.'"

Favre and Waveland Mayor John Mason, along with city representatives, also were unhappy that supervisors threw a monkey wrench into plans that would have temporarily solved the county's problems and expense at the Standard rubbish site.

Last week, the District received two bids from individuals offering to take care of the county's rubbish, and Cowand reported to supervisors Monday that the District voted unanimously to negotiate a two-year contract with Trans American Waste of Mississippi.

Trans-American has offered to operate a 120-acre tract off Fire Tower Road that is owned by Curtis Johnson and already permitted by the state Department of Environmental Quality to accept Class I and II rubbish.

Cowand said the county could cut its current operating costs by two-thirds by closing Standard and getting residents and commercial haulers to dump all their rubbish at the new site off Hwy. 43.

At Monday's meeting, supervisors, with Cowand abstaining, asked the District to reject all bids for a rubbish site until there is a proposal on the table from some firm that wants to provide the county a free rubbish site or a operate a combination rubbish site/landfill in the buffer zone.

Favre said the District should temporarily contract with Johnson for a rubbish site. "We're missing the boat on some savings," said Favre.

It currently costs the county between $20,000 and $21,000 extra each month to keep the Standard site open because it has been downgraded and Class I rubbish must be sorted out, temporarily stored in a rolloff container, then transported to a landfill in McNeil at a dumping cost of $16.50 a ton. The Johnson proposal would cut the price to about $4 a ton.

The request by supervisors to "reject all bids" seemed to have taken Cowand and the District by surprise.

Moran called it a "band-aid" approach. He wants the District to wait "two to four months" when he said he expected developers to come forward with plans in the buffer zone. He said DEQ has given the county until next June to continue operating Standard.

Steve Seymour, whose District 4 includes Fire Tower Road, said he was strongly opposed to the Fire Tower Road site. "There are a number of expensive homes in this area, and I am going on record saying I will vote against it," Seymour said.

Moran claimed if the county agrees to divert its rubbish to the site, "We're opening the door to a landfill in the Kiln"

(Any request for a landfill, however, would require District approval to amend the county's 20-year plan for disposing of solid waste (household garbage).

Moran added, "I have nothing against Mr. Johnson. I'm not trying to shut him down...If my brother owned the land, I'd vote against him."

L Kay Johnson, city manager of Picayune, was among the people in the audience. The city and the Pearl River County Board of Supervisors are on record already opposed to one landfill site suggested in the buffer zone off Flat Top Road and near the borders of Hancock-Pearl River counties.

Pilot

museum, Shepard was one of the handful of people selected to be presented to the Queen.

The group was briefed on protocol and was to be introduced to Her Majesty in a receiving line.

When Shepard's time came, however, the person performing the introductions had passed by.

"I found (the Queen) standing right in front of me expecting to be introduced and no one there to do it," said Shepard. "So, I spoke, which was probably very much against protocol."

Shepard's wife, Jeanne, was able to capture the moment on film, but forfeited her chance to brush with royalty when the crowds pushed around her as she stepped back to snap the

Just what does one say to a Queen?

"I told her I was stationed (at Duxford) in 1943 when she visited with her parents," Shepard said.

In January 1942, 21-year-old Shepard enlisted in the Army Air Corps and left his home in New Orleans for Alabama to begin flight training.

He eventually ended up just south of Cambridge at Duxford Airfield where he served with the 83rd Fighter Squadron in the 78th Fighter Group.

Between April, 1943 and July, 1944, Shepard flew 90 combat missions and accumulated 250 combat hours at Duxford.

His plane was a P-47 Thunderbolt which bore the name "Strato Viking."

"(The name) was a figment of my imagination," explained Shepard. "We were Vikings going out to fly in the stratosphere."

Each day brought the possibility of a mission for the 70 or so pilots in the squadron, who reported daily to the "ready room" to wait for assignments, unless instructed otherwise.

"We did everything," Shepard said trying to explain what a mission would entail. "(We did) fighter sweeps, bomber escorts, dive bombing and strafing attacks."

His very first mission was a fighter sweep on northern France near the Belgium border.

"We were in the air only 55 minutes," recalled Shepard, who said he was nonetheless "very nervous."

Although he never sustained a hit, the danger of the job was not lost on the pilot.

"We knew we were going out to potentially face the enemy," Shepard said. "I got good and scared several times."

His closest call came after D-Day when his assignment called for an attack of a known concentration of German troops behind the lines in France.

"They were waiting for us and threw up all kinds of fire," Shepard recounted. "We had to abandon the target."

Transferred home in 1944, Shepard planned on returning to Duxford when his orders were changed and he was kept "stateside" as an instructor for new pilots.

Once discharged, he graduated from LSU in engineering and went to work for Chance Vought Aircraft until his retirement in 1984.

He and Jeanne were married in 1950 and the couple have four children and four grandchildren.

Two of their sons were able to meet them in England to visit the museum and see the replica of the plane Shepard flew.

He called the dedication a "thrilling occasion which brought back many memories."

In addition to meeting the Queen, it was the "fly-by" of the B-17, P-47 and two Mustangs following the ceremony which Shepard found especially exciting.

Once a pilot, always a pilot.

the city that gives the city drainage responsibility for much of the area in issue. That agreement, he said, clearly showed CSX's intention of having the city deal with drainage maintenance.

Favre said he is "very pleased" with the current standing of the matter. CSX has made "a complete change, a complete turnaround."

Later in the meeting, council agreed to advertise for bids on the first phase of the project immediately. In all the city plans to spend $5 million on drainage upgrades, and another $5.5 million on water, sewer and gas line improvements and extensions.

The upgrades are financed by general obligation and revenue bond issues.

Waveland will host blood drive

An average adult has 10-12 pints of blood. Surely you can spare one. Everyone has what it takes to help save a life - one unit of blood.

All eligible donors are encouraged to stop by and donate a unit of blood at the Red Cross community blood drive hosted by the Waveland Community. The drive will be held on Wednesday, October 15, from 2:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m., at the American Legion Post #77, on Coleman Avenue in Waveland, MS.

Remember, the need for blood is constant - many patients with serious illnesses such as leukemia or undergoing emergency surgery are relying on volunteer blood donations to help meet their needs. If the goal of 40 is reached on Monday, this will mean that at least 120 patients in local hospitals will be given a second chance to celebrate a holiday or a birthday.

Eligible donors are persons who are at least 17 years old, weigh at least 110 pounds, and have not donated in the past 56 days. Please come out and support your community blood drive. For more information on how you can donate blood, host a blood drive or volunteer for the American Red Cross, please call 1-888-432-5663.

BUSINESS NEWS

Southeast Asian ambassadors to visit state

Nine Southeast Asian ambassadors to the United States will visit the state Oct. 11-14 to learn more about the state and promote trade and investment opportunities between businesses in Mississippi and the region.

"It is an honor to host this visit by these ambassadors," said Governor Kirk Fordice. "This tour will expand their knowledge of Mississippi and, in turn, provide Mississippi businesses the opportunity to learn about these Southeast Asian markets and their potential for trade and joint venture possibilities."

"We hope this visit will lead to increased business ties between Mississippi and Southeast Asia."

The ambassadors represent all the member countries of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), an organization that encourages U.S. trade and investment in that growing region of the world. ASEAN includes Brunei Darussalam, Indonesia, Laos, Malaysia, Myanmar, Philippines, Singapore, Thailand and Vietnam.

Economic and Community Development's (MDECD) International Division and the U.S.-ASEAN Business Council Inc., in conjunction with the ASEAN Washington Committee. The U.S.-ASEAN Business Council is the national private organization in the U.S. representing American business interests in ASEAN. Mississippi is a state member of the Council.

"This visit underlines the importance of the ASEAN countries to U.S. companies and workers," said Ernest Z. Bower, president of the U.S.-ASEAN Business Council. "The results will be expanded exports and new joint ventures in Mississippi and ASEAN."

MDECD Executive Director Jimmy Heidel stressed the importance of the ambassadors' tour.

"The delegation's visit to Mississippi is significant because it marks the first time all nine ASEAN ambassadors have visited a U.S. state on a formal tour," said Jimmy Heidel, MDECD executive director. "The dynamic economies of the ASEAN nations have so much market potential that the State of Mississippi opened an ASEAN trade office in Singapore in July."

"This visit and the business meetings associated with it should help forge strong business relationships between the ASEAN region and Mississippi."

The ambassador's tour includes two days on the Mississippi Gulf Coast and two days in Jackson. On the Coast, the delegation will tour Ingalls Shipbuilding, attend a dinner at Beauvoir, and participate in a business luncheon at the Great Southern Club in Gulfport.

In Jackson, the ambassadors will hear a presentation on the State of Mississippi at the Mississippi Resource Center, be the guests of Governor Kirk Fordice at a business reception and dinner at the Governor's Mansion, and participate in a conference for Mississippi business to learn of trade and joint venture opportunities in the ASEAN region. In 1996, Mississippi exports to ASEAN totaled more than $107 million.

Mississippi business executives have a unique opportunity to learn about developing trade and broadening international networks in one of the world's most dynamic market regions.

"Business Opportunities for Mississippi Companies in Southeast Asia" will feature the nine Association of Southeast Asian Nations ambassadors at the Crowne Plaza Hotel in Jackson Oct. 14 beginning at 8 a.m.

The ASEAN delegation includes Ambassador Nitya Pibulsonggram, Ambassador of Thailand and chairman of the ASEAN Washington Committee; Ambassador Pengiran Anak Dato' Haji Puteh, Embassy of Brunei Darussalam; Ambassador Dr. Arifin M. Sirgar, Embassy of the Republic of Indonesia; Ambassador Hiem Phommachanh, Embassy of Lao People's Democratic Republic; Ambassador Dato' Dali Hashim, Embassy of Malaysia; Ambassador U Tin Winn, Embassy of the Union of Myanmar; Ambassador Raul Ch. Rabe, Embassy of the Philippines; Ambassador Chan Heng Chee, Embassy of the Republic of Singapore; and Ambassador Le Van Bang, Embassy of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam.

MDECD is sponsoring the seminar in conjunction with the U.S.-ASEAN Business Council Inc., the national private organization in the United States representing American business interests in ASEAN. Mississippi is a state member of the council.

The Council and its members are committed to expanding the American competitive position in the region. The countries of ASEAN are home to more than 420 million people with a combined Gross Domestic Product of more than $600 billion in 1996.

"This visit underlines the importance of the ASEAN countries to U.S. companies and workers," said Bower. "The results will be expanded exports and new joint ventures in Mississippi and ASEAN."

The ASEAN ambassadors, along with their economic and commercial counselors, will conduct the seminar for small and medium-sized manufacturers, exporters, importers, traders and investors. The counselors will be available for one-on-one sessions with Mississippi companies interested in specific business opportunities in international sales, marketing, or servicing international customers.

Cost is $50 prior to Oct. 14. On-site registration is $65. To pre-register, contact Marsha Hamilton, MDECD International Division in Jackson, at 601-359-6672.

Mississippi Homemaker
Volunteers

Hancock County MHV members attended the coastal area fall meeting in Wiggins Sept. 30 at St. Francis Xavier Church. Some 60 members from six counties, their officers and home economists also attended.

Mike Reader, WLOX weatherman, was guest speaker. He praised the role of homemakers and volunteers — raising children, keeping a home, managing finances and volunteering time to the community.

Jan Lukens introduced "Money: 2000" — a program to assist anyone managing finances to either save or reduce debt by $2,000 by the year 2000.

Brochures were distributed by Judy Breland, home economist, Stone County, on children and divorce.

MHV state president Melba White thanked members for all the projects they're involved in and said that through their generosity over $4 million in time was given to needy citizens, hospitalized children and various communities.

Bettye Wadsworth, leadership development specialist, reminded members to turn in their volunteer hours.

Entertainment was provided by Stephanie Rhodes, Miss Hospitality Teenager, Mississippi.

Because of a trip to St. Francisville, La. Oct. 23, the regular meeting will take place Nov. 20 at the home economist's office beginning at 9 a.m. A few seats are still available. Call 467-5456 or 467-5018 for information.

The "WORD" for the Week

Dennis J. Prutow, Box 303, Sterling, KS 67579

Who is "the man Christ Jesus" (1 Timothy 2:5)? Is He only a man or is He actually "God with us" (Matthew 1:23)? What have Christians throughout history maintained?

Jesus Christ is fully God. He is the second person of the Trinity. He is the Son of God. He is eternally begotten of the Father. He is of one essence with the Father. He is equal with the Father. He was in the beginning with the Father and always has been.

Jesus Christ is fully human, God in human form. He was conceived in the womb of a virgin named Mary by the power of the Holy Spirit. He thus took upon Himself human nature, body and soul, with all its essential properties and infirmities but without sin.

Jesus Christ is the Savior. In His human nature united to His divine nature, He lived a life of sinless perfection. He fulfilled all God's commandments. He permitted Himself to be sacrificed on a cross. By his perfect obedience and sacrifice He fulfilled his mission to purchase forgiveness and eternal life for people like us. Jesus Christ is Lord. He rose from the dead with the same body in which he suffered. He ascended into heaven. He sat down at the right hand of God the Father. He reigns as King of Kings and Lord of Lords.

Knowing Right From Wrong

We live in an ever changing society and we may feel that because everyone is doing something, it must be right. However, "wrong" has a peculiar way of disguising itself; it may take on the appearance of a need, a duty, a convenience, or even revenge. When we do something wrong we hurt ourselves, even when we think that, "no one will ever know". Our Heavenly Father has given us life and a free will, and every day we are faced with taking responsibility for our actions and knowing right from wrong. Inside of everyone, is God's Spirit that tells us good from bad, and if we listen to that small voice we can usually recognize what is right. God's laws are unchangeable, and He knows that because we are not perfect, our actions may not always be proper; however, God's love for us and our repentance will always lead to His forgiveness.

You may think that everything you do is right, but remember that the Lord judges your motives.

Fall Muster

Fall Muster slated at Beauvoir

The eleventh annual Fall Muster will be held at Beauvoir on October 18-19, 1997. Co-sponsored by the historic site and the Jefferson Davis Legion, a statewide reenactment organization, the popular weekend event portrays life in Civil War Mississippi through a variety of activities. These "living history" activities include camp tours, military drills, skirmishes and civilian activities.

A special aspect of Fall Muster involves visitor participation. Daily band concerts by the Twelfth Louisiana String Band, coupled with dance lessons, encourage visitors to experience history by singing and dancing to 1860s music. Another daily activity invites children to experience a bygone era by engaging in nineteenth century children's games on the lawn of the Beauvoir House. Visitors are also invited to join the reenactors in an old-fashioned picnic basket auction, an activity that combines history and home cooking.

According to Director Keith Hardison, "Fall Muster is, perhaps, the most successful of the historic site's education programs. Thousands of visitors are expected to join 500 reenactors from eight states to experience the sights, sounds and even smells of the 1861-1865 conflict. While there are many ways to learn about history, none is as effective and exciting as experiencing it first-hand. Fall Muster gives both coast residents and visitors the opportunity to do just that."

Another unique activity at Fall Muster consists of "Civil War shopping." Visitors are encouraged to take advantage of special bargains on event T-shirts, flags, books, and other merchandise at Beauvoir's Stars and Bars Gift Shop. A variety of nineteenth century period reproductions ranging from weapons and camp furniture to dresses and uniforms, will be available on "Sutlers Row." While shopping, visitors may wish to stop at one of the concession areas for a quick lunch.

Fall Muster hours are 9:00 A.M.-5:00 P.M. on Saturday and 9:00 A.M.-3:30 P.M. on Sunday. Admission rates are $7.50 for adults, $6.75 for senior citizens (65 and over) and active military personnel, and $4.50 for children (6-16). Tickets are good for both days, and group rates are available. For more information call (601) 388-9074 or (800) 570-3818.

Beauvoir, the home of Jefferson Davis and the site of the Jefferson Davis Presidential Library, is a national historic landmark property of the Mississippi Division, United Sons of Confederate Veterans, Inc. It is located at the intersection of U.S. Highway 90 and Beauvoir Road in Biloxi, Mississippi.

National rodeo finals set for Oct. 24-26 in Biloxi

Members of the Harrison County tourism Commission, along with county, city and area businesses, officially announced the Professional Cowboy Association Rodeo Finals will be held on the Mississippi Gulf Coast Oct. 24-26 and officially designated the weekend as Gulf Coast "Rodeo Days."

The rodeo, which will be held at the Mississippi Coast Coliseum, is the culmination of over 120 rodeos around the country and will feature the top 15 money winners in each of the following categories: bare-back riding, calf roping, steer wrestling, barrel racing, break-away roping, team roping (heading), team roping (heeling), and bull riding.

"The Professional Cowboy Association Rodeo Finals is just another example of the diversity of exciting special events to be held on the Gulf Coast," said Stephen Richer, executive director, Mississippi Gulf Coast Convention & Visitors Bureau (which operates under the direction of the Harrison County Tourism Commission). "This event brings us one event closer to our goal of 52 unique events a year that we can offer the visitor."

To help market and broaden the appeal of the event to the caliber of those held in Las Vegas and Reno, Nev., community and business leaders have formed a Steering Committee. The committee is chaired by Jeff Dahl, general manager, Casino Magic-Biloxi, and Wayne Yarbrough, Boomtown Casino. Harrison County Tourism Commissioner Bob Lutz is serving as liaison to the group, along with PCA rodeo organizers Bo Campbell and Joe Haydock.

The Gulf Coast hopes to take advantage of the economic success enjoyed in Las Vegas and Reno. In Las Vegas, over 170,000 people attend the 10-day rodeo.

HUBfest set for Oct. 18

HUBfest is the site for the Mississippi/Louisiana State Final of the True Value/Jimmy Dean Country Showdown in Hattiesburg Saturday, Oct. 18 beginning at noon. Following the excitement of the Showdown, special guest Chad Simmons will be performing.

Now in its 16th year, the Country Showdown is the world's largest country music talent contest and radio promotion. Over 1,000 live events will be staged during 1997, involving thousands of artists, over 400 country radio stations and more than 4,000,000 country music fans nationwide.

There will be something for everybody at the HUBfest with three different stages showcasing the best in gospel, rhythm and blues and country music. In addition, there will be a variety of arts and crafts, Mississippi cookin', and a separate Kids-Fest featuring games and pony rides. Bring the family and stay the day.

For 11 talented acts, the Mississippi/Louisiana State Showdown is the next step towards country music stardom. From there, it's on to the regional competition later this year, and then, on Nov. 14, the televised national final will take place at Universal Studios Florida. Six regional winners will vie for an all-expense-paid trip to Universal Studios Florida to compete for the grand prize of $50,000 and the national title.

The stakes are high as artists from Mississippi vie for the Showdown title, a $1,000 cash prize, and the opportunity to advance to the regional level. Bands and solo acts participating in the state final of True Value/Jimmy Dean Country Showdown have already won local competitions and represent country music radio stations comprising the nationwide Showdown network.

Admission to the HUBfest and the Country Showdown with special guest Chad Simmons is free.

"You can't get a ticket for this event — it is so popular," said Terry Jicinsky of the Las Vegas Convention & Visitors Authority.

In Reno, the nine-day event attracts over 73,000 people — 60 percent of them are visitors — and creates an economic impact of $8.2 million ($2.7 million from gaming revenue). Thanks to the addition of live name entertainment, parades, contests, and food festival, billed under the umbrella of "Country Junction," the Rodeo has reached all-time attendance highs.

The average visitor to Reno Rodeo is under 45 and has an average household income of over $100,000. They stay 3.1 days; 69 percent of them stay in area hotels at regular room rates; 14 percent are part of a tour/travel group. Rodeo visitors gambled an average of 3 hours a day with a budget of $144. Country Junction visitors spent even more time in casinos — 4.1 hours a day and had an average budget of $307.

"This event is a perfect match for the Gulf Coast. The rodeo attracts a great demographic who have money to spend in our hotels, restaurants, attractions and casinos. We look forward to welcoming the competitors and spectators with open arms, so that we can see a bigger and better event next year," said Bob Lutz, commissioner, Harrison County Tourism Commission.

Tickets are available through TicketMaster and at Casino Magic and Boomtown Casino, event sponsors. Cost is $8 and $12 for general admission seats; discounts are available with advance purchase.

Exhibit opens at Capitol Museum

"Ten Point Deer Camp," an exhibition of photographs and artifacts depicting life in an Issaquena County deer camp between 1927 and 1962 opens at the Old Capitol Museum Oct. 19.

The photographer was Florence Huffman, who accompanied her husband on visits to the camp until 1950, when they made the camp their year-round home. Huffman documented social activities and mores, camp operations and hunting rituals and the wilderness that was rapidly disappearing.

Text accompanying the photographs is written by Alan Huffman, grandson of the photographer and author of an upcoming book from the University Press of Mississippi, Ten Point: Deer Camp in the Mississippi Delta.

Huffman has donated his grandmother's photographic collection to the Department of Archives and History.

The exhibition continues through Dec. 31.

You will benefit two ways when you get your vehicle ready for winter: increased peace of mind and increased vehicle life. A survey of ASE-certified master auto technicians indicates that consumers can extend the life of their vehicles by 50 percent through regular maintenance.

The National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE), the nonprofit organization that tests and certifies automotive technicians, offers the following tips to help motorists get ready for winter. Some of the tips are easy; others require a professional technician.

1. The basics — Begin by reading the owner's manual, becoming familiar with the various components and systems. Follow the recommended service schedules.

2. Housekeeping — Wash and wax your vehicle to protect its finish. Inspect lights and bulbs. Replace worn wiper blades; keep plenty of washer fluid on hand; carry emergency gear — a shovel, blanket, cellular phone or CB radio, etc.

3. Battery — The only accurate way to detect a weak battery is with the professional equipment available at a good repair shop. However, do-it-yourselfers can handle routine care by scraping away corrosion from posts and cable connections, cleaning all surfaces, and retightening connections. Be sure to wear eye protection and gloves.

4. Engine oil — The oil and filter should be changed as specified in the manual.

5. Cooling system — The level, condition and concentration of the antifreeze should be checked periodically. The tightness and condition of drive belts, clamps and hoses should be checked by a pro. Let the engine cool off before working on the radiator. Have the cooling system flushed and refilled as recommended.

6. Engine performance — Problems with rough idling, hard starts, stalling or diminished power should be corrected before cold weather sets in. Describe any changes in performance to a qualified technician. The air, fuel and PCV filters should be replaced as specified.

7. Heater/defroster — To ensure comfort and safety, the heater and defroster must be in good working condition.

8. Tires — Rotate tires about every 5,000 miles. The air pressure should be checked once a month; let the tires "cool down" first. Examine tires for cuts and nicks, uneven wearing, and cupping. Check the spare, too. Note that some of today's body styles and tire packages are not compatible with tire chains.

9. Brakes — Brakes should be inspected as recommended in your manual, or sooner if you notice pulsations, grabbing, noises or longer stopping distances.

10. Finding good auto service — Ask friends and associates for recommendations. Contact your local consumer organization regarding reputation, complaints, etc.

Look for an orderly, neat facility; modern equipment; customer-service awards; and an attentive staff. Policies regarding diagnostic fees, labor rates and guarantees should be posted.

Look for repair facilities that employ technicians certified by ASE. ASE-certified technicians have passed national competency exams and have two years or more of work experience. They wear blue-and-white shoulder insignia and carry credentials listing their areas of technical expertise. Their employers often display the blue-and-white ASE sign.

To help motorists get ready for winter, ASE has prepared a brochure. For a free copy, send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope to ASE Winter Brochure, Dept. MCF97, 13505 Dulles Technology Drive, Suite 2, Herndon, VA 20171.

Look both ways before using car phones

Due to today's hectic lifestyles, cellular phones have become a popular accessory in many cars because of their ease of use and convenience. However, the Insurance Information Institute (I.I.I.) urges drivers to take precautions when using cellular phones.

A study by the Rochester Institute of Technology found that drivers with cellular phones are 34 percent more likely to be involved in traffic accidents than drivers without phones.

Protect your car's surfaces from harsh winter weather

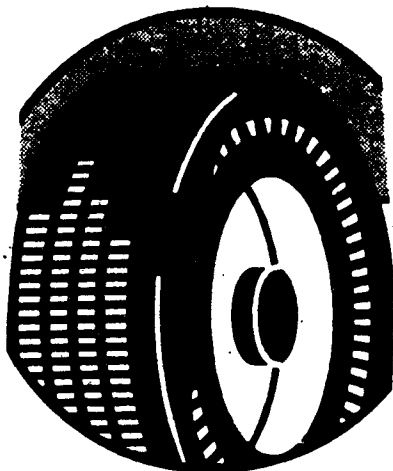

You wouldn't go outside without your coat during the winter, nor should your car go without its own protection. Wind, rain and snow combined with road sand, gravel and salt quickly can take the luster out of car finishes and even do serious damage to painted surfaces. Winter is one of the most challenging times of year for your car's exterior surfaces, so it's important to begin preparing your car this fall for the rough winter conditions ahead. By following a few simple steps now and throughout the winter, you can keep your car looking like new through the harshest weather and protect the significant investment it represents.

Paint Protection

"Typically, a car's paint takes more physical abuse in winter than at any other time of the year," says Michael Howe, a scientist for Armor All, the leading producer of car care appearance products. "With all of the debris on the roads, your car is more likely to be scratched. As moisture penetrates the scratch and alternately freezes and thaws, it weakens and eventually cracks surrounding paint. Eventually, you have an invitation to rust and corrosion."

A quick and easy way to prevent this from happening is by applying a protectant, like Armor All's Armor Plate Paint Protectant, to your car's painted surfaces. Armor Plate represents the latest development in paint protection, offering waxlike protection in a fraction of the application time. It sprays on quickly and wipes off easily without leaving a haze or dried residue as with wax. In just 15 minutes, you can give your car a glossy shine and winter protection that will last for up to six weeks. Unlike wax, this protectant is nonabrasive and safe to use even on the clear-coat finish found on many new cars.

The experts recommend applying a good base coat of paint protectant in the fall before winter arrives, then maintaining the surface with at least monthly applications during winter. And, remember to regularly wash off the car during the winter to remove corrosive elements. Do this both before you apply a protectant and periodically, especially after heavy storms.

Tire Care

Tires have a tough job, and never more so than during winter. Armor All Protectant will not only keep them looking good during the harshest weather, but it also will provide a barrier to the elements and ozone, which can cause rubber to deteriorate.

If you are looking for a "hands-off" approach to tire care, Armor All has developed a special product, Armor All Tire Foam, an effective way to clean, shine and protect tires in one easy step. Just spray, and walk away; there's no wiping or rinsing involved, and it leaves your tires with a bright, glossy shine.

If you live in a region of the country that sees winter snow and ice, another easy tip for winter car protection is to spray protectant in the wheel wells to prevent the buildup of snow, ice and road salt. It's best to start this practice in the fall, before the really cold weather hits.

Trim and Bumper Protection

Other parts of your car's exterior, like the bumpers, trim and rubber door moldings, also need extra protection when the mercury drops. These materials can be affected by extreme temperatures and are susceptible to the sun's ultraviolet (UV) radiation, which causes cracking, fading and hardening, even in the winter. Armor All Protectants have a proven formula that helps keep these surfaces supple and looking like new. In cold weather, protectant can be applied in the garage if necessary. Finally, make it a practice in the fall to inspect the windshield wipers and replace them if there's any sign of wear or deterioration. You're going to be counting on them in upcoming months, and it's good insurance to have them ready to deal with winter's worst.

Don't let warning lights darken car's performance

This manual contains warnings against operating procedures which could result in an accident or bodily injury. It contains CAUTIONS against procedures which could result in damage to your vehicle. If you do not read this entire manual, you may miss important information. Observe all Warnings and Cautions."

This precautionary statement, typical to most vehicle owner's manuals, explains the importance of reading and heeding the advice for operating and maintaining your vehicle.

A section that should not be overlooked in these manuals is the explanation about your vehicle's warning lights. Warning lights tell you that something is wrong. Not obeying your vehicle's advice could leave you stranded and/or put a large dent in your wallet.

The following information, compiled by Gates Rubber Co. engineers, explains the meaning of various warning lights, what triggers each one to come on, what can happen if corrective action is prolonged and how to prevent each light from coming on.

If you haven't had the time or motivation to acquaint yourself with the details of your car's warning lights, this summary could save you hours of frustration and maybe a lot of money.

VOLTAGE LIGHT

This light monitors your car's electrical-system voltage. The light warns you that the battery is being discharged. If you continuously drive while this light is on, you could drain your battery and not be able to restart the car.

Battery discharge can be caused by a loose, missing or broken generator belt. Look under the hood, and visually check the belt. Do not continue driving if the belt is missing, broken or loose. (On many late-model vehicles, one belt — serpentine belt — will drive several accessories, including the generator.) If the belt is in good condition, but the light remains on, immediate service should be performed. If the belt is 4 years old, Gates recommends changing the belt before it fails.

ENGINE WARNING LIGHT

This light, or a temperature gauge, warns you of an overheated engine. If this light illuminates, move your vehicle safely off the road, put it in park, turn your air conditioning off, open all of the windows, adjust your heat level to maximum hot, and turn the fan to high. Then, open the hood; if steam or water is coming from the engine, stand clear to prevent getting burned. Visually check drive belts for damage or looseness, especially the water-pump belt. Also, check if the cooling fan is running. The radiator and radiator hoses should not leak coolant. Stop the engine immediately if coolant is leaking, the cooling fan is not turning, or the drive belt is missing or damaged.

Overheating can have a number of causes. It is often the result of coolant loss or low coolant level. Low coolant level may be due to leaks in hoses, the radiator or the engine itself.

Too much heat in your engine can cause serious long-term damage. Excessive heat causes valve stems to stick, pistons to scuff and seize, and cylinder heads to warp and crack. Serious damage can mean an expensive engine replacement.

To avoid overheating, constantly check the condition of the radiator and hoses. An easy and effective way to check hoses is to perform the "squeeze test." When the engine is cool, squeeze each hose near every clamp and connector. Use two fingers and a thumb to check for weaknesses and any limpness between the middle and ends of the hose. If the ends are soft and feel mushy, chances are electrochemical hose degradation (ECD) is occurring. To avoid breakdowns, hose replacement is recommended.

Gates recommends replacing all coolant hoses every four years, regardless of their appearance, for safe driving.

A routine inspection of the thermostat every six months will help prevent the possibility of overheating. To check, allow the engine to warm up for 10 minutes to 15 minutes, then feel the upper radiator hose. If the hose does not feel warm, the thermostat is malfunctioning and should be replaced.

Campaign urges drivers to 'brake and steer' with ABS

Record numbers of Americans drive cars equipped with anti-lock braking systems (ABS), and with the challenges of winter driving ranging from rain-slicked streets along the Gulf Coast to snowy highways in the Northeast, it's more important than ever for drivers to understand how to maximize the advantage of ABS.

In response to this need, the ABS Education Alliance sponsors the America Brakes for Safety campaign to help drivers better understand anti-lock braking systems and how to maintain control of their vehicles in emergency braking situations.

"Cars are made to steer; they shouldn't skid," says Rosemarie Kitchin of the ABS Education Alliance. "And, that's what ABS does — it lets the drivers steer their cars even in emergency situations under the worst of road conditions."

"Conventional braking systems require that drivers hit the brakes, remember to pump the brake pedal if the wheels start to lock and steer into the skid if they start to slide. That's a lot to remember in a few seconds," she continues. "But, with ABS, it's simple: Brake and steer. That's a big benefit in a panic situation."

Still, the alliance recognizes that anti-lock brakes can make a greater difference in enhancing safety on the road when even more drivers understand how they work and the way they should be used.

The idea behind anti-lock brakes is simple. ABS eliminates the need to pump the brakes, because it pumps automatically at a rate of up to 18 times per second anytime a sensor detects the start of wheel lock. Because the vehicle's wheels are kept from locking up on slippery roads, the driver can continue to steer.

There are two kinds of anti-lock brakes: four-wheel ABS, found on passenger cars and some newer light trucks, and rear-wheel (RWAL) ABS, found primarily on light trucks. The difference lies in the way drivers operate the brakes. With four-wheel-ABS-equipped cars, drivers must maintain firm pressure on the brake and steer.

RWAL-equipped vehicles are designed to maintain directional stability and prevent the back end from swinging out in emergency braking situations. RWAL systems modulate the braking pressure of the rear wheels only, which prevents wheel lock of the rear wheels and keeps the vehicle moving in a straight path.

To maintain steering control with a rear-wheel anti-lock vehicle, the driver must control front-wheel braking to

Important facts you should know before hitting the road

These days, cars can do practically everything but drive themselves. Computerized maps show you the way when you are lost. Gauges tell you how many miles you can travel before running out of fuel. Headlights automatically turn on as the sky dims. And, keyless remotes even can start your engine and warm the car while you sit comfortably in the house.

However, no matter how advanced technology becomes, there is one area that always will be the responsibility of the driver — car maintenance. Just how much do you know about the basic maintenance of your car?

According to the experts at Kendall Motor Oil, there are some simple maintenance guidelines everyone on the road should know in terms of daily upkeep. In order to find out whether you are a full-fledged grease monkey, shade-tree mechanic or need to start reading your car manual for fun, take this simple quiz from Kendall. Give yourself one point for every correct answer.

- 7 - 4 Shade-tree mechanic: You have some basic automobile knowledge, but don't quit your day job!
- 3 - 0 Car-care novice: You better read your car manual before you find yourself on the side of the road!

Since mistakes can be considered learning experiences, take a look at the correct answers, and learn some general facts about car-care maintenance.

• Fuel filters — The main function of the fuel filter is to trap contaminants like dirt and rust and prevent them from affecting engine operation and fuel performance. A clogged filter can result in such problems as hard starting, lack of high-speed power and stalling. Typically, original equipment manufacturers suggest changing your fuel filter every 30,000 miles, although some mechanics recommend an annual replacement.

• Tire rotation — Tire rotation is recommended every 6,000 miles in order to ensure that tires wear evenly and to prolong the life of your tires. An easy way to remember this task is to have the tires rotated during every other oil change.

• Oil filters — The oil filter's job is to trap impurities like dirt, metal particles and carbon particles (soot), keeping them from contaminating the oil and decreasing its effectiveness. The oil filter should be changed every time you change the oil.

• Motor oil — According to the experts at Kendall Motor Oil, a car's oil should be changed every 3,000 miles, along with the filter. Turbocharged and diesel engines require more frequent oil changes because of the high temperatures that the turbocharger bearings endure.

Now that you know when and why, learn what to put in your vehicle. Whether you change your oil yourself or have the professionals do it for you, there are a few facts and terms you should know before choosing a motor oil.

• The letters and numbers — You've seen the strange configuration of letters and numbers before — 5W-30, 15W-40, 10W-30 — but what does it all mean? The coding found on the front of a motor oil bottle refers to the product's viscosity, or flow rate/thickness of the oil.

Checking your owner's manual usually will answer the question of what oil grade is best for your vehicle. Engine manufacturers highly recommend multigrade engine oils. These lubricants provide good flow at start-up, but still maintain thickness at high temperatures, allowing your car to adapt to a greater range of circumstances.

An all-purpose oil like 10W-30 is an example of a multigrade oil that is well-suited for most passenger vehicles.

• Synthetic vs. petroleum — Not all of the motor oil used today is made from the traditional crude oil taken from the ground. Synthetic oil is a type of man-made oil created from chemical reactions. Formerly used to handle the extreme temperatures of jet engines, synthetic motor oil was designed for car and truck owners whose vehicles needed engine protection from demanding conditions.

More expensive than the familiar petroleum-based oils, synthetic oil is definitely worth the price difference if you have a turbocharged or fuel-injected engine, drive at high speeds over long distances, or use your vehicle for towing. A quality synthetic oil can serve as an inexpensive insurance policy for those operating under extreme conditions, making the difference in price worth every penny.

As your car ages, it is even more important to check the

Prepare cooling system for winter

Normal summer driving habits will accelerate the deterioration of a car's cooling system this winter, according to engineers at The Gates Rubber Co. When a cooling system fails, whether it is summer or winter, the engine overheats. When a car's engine is exposed to overheating for an extended period of time, metal engine parts can be seriously damaged and require expensive repair.

Overheating can be the result of low coolant level or a leak in the car's cooling system. Every car, even a new one, is a candidate for overheating. By completing an inspection of the following coolant-system problems, you can avoid the consequences of an overheated engine.

Coolant loss

Low coolant level leads to overheating, because there isn't enough coolant in the system to absorb engine heat. Gates Rubber Co. engineers explain that the excess air due to a low coolant level is a poor heat conductor and won't do an effective job in transferring heat from the engine to be cooled by the radiator.

The coolant level in your radiator should be filled to its maximum specified height. If the coolant level continues to recede after repeated fillings, you probably have a leak in the system.

Water-pump leaks

It is common to find a few drops of coolant under the water pump, but excessive leaking indicates a problem. Housing bolts on the water pump should be tight. If the bolts are tight and leaking still persists, the pump's inner seal is probably damaged, and the pump must be replaced.

Coolant-hose leaks

Coolant hoses are structurally the weakest components of a car's cooling system and, therefore, the most likely source of leaks. Hoses are made of rubber compounds for flexibility, which unfortunately are less durable than metal. Gate's engineers have determined that intense engine heat can harden and crack even the best rubber. Oil, electrochemical degradation and even time can break down hoses and cause leaks.

In many cases, hose leaks occur at faulty connections. Make sure the hose clamps are secure. If a leak still appears, change the hose.

When replacing a hose, it is also a good idea to change the clamps. Traditional worm-drive clamps will work.

However, Gates says that the new, thermoplastic Power-GripSB clamps should be used for a maintenance-free hose connection.

To extend the service life of damaging external elements like hot manifolds, oil-leaking parts and sharp edges. To avoid internal hose damage, do not use soluble oils found in some coolants.

Because leaks are the No. 1 cause of coolant leaking problems, Gates recommends that

Car-care options for ecology-minded owners

Government regulations and rising consumer awareness continue to drive the push for environmental improvements in the auto industry. Motorists do not need to wait for government intervention, however, to begin making earth-friendly car-care decisions.

Two of the biggest polluting byproducts of the automobile today are used motor oil and conventional antifreeze. Fortunately, ecology-minded car owners who think about the impact of their actions are discovering alternatives to their traditional car-care regimen.

The environmental problem of used motor oil

If one quart of motor oil can produce a two-acre slick and one gallon fouls a million gallons of drinking water, the damage being done by the current "change it as often as the seasons" habit is considerable. In the United States alone, more than 1 billion gallons of motor oil are consumed annually. According to some estimates, as much as 40 percent of this amount is discarded improperly, dumped in the ground or thrown out with the trash to end up in landfills, seeping into groundwater.

One way to significantly reduce the amount of used motor oil in America would be to make a motor oil that lasts longer and doesn't break down after 3,000 miles of severe service. In point of fact, such oils already exist. Instead of conventional petroleum-based products, the new synthesized motor oils last longer, perform better and offer a host of additional benefits as well.

In 1972, AMSOIL Inc. of Superior, Wis., developed the first American Petroleum Institute-rated synthetic motor oil for passenger-car applications. On its first can, AMSOIL proclaimed a 25,000 miles or one year oil drain interval. By adopting an extended oil-change interval of one year instead of every three months, motorists would produce 75 percent less motor-oil waste.

In addition to reducing the amount of waste oil, converting America's cars and trucks to synthetic motor oil would also significantly reduce the hundreds of millions of pounds of high-density polyethylene (HDPE) bottles that are used annually to package motor oil. Although this concept of extending drain intervals and its environmental benefits was introduced by AMSOIL in 1972, the environmental significance only recently has been recognized by the mainstream.

Potential health hazards of antifreeze

The primary chemical in traditional antifreeze is ethylene glycol. Highly toxic, less than one-half cup is a lethal dose for the average-size human. Lesser amounts can cause serious kidney damage and central-nervous-system depression. What's worse, when spilled on driveways and roadsides, its sweet smell and taste attract wildlife and make it more likely to be consumed. For this reason, several companies in recent years have introduced propylene glycol-based antifreeze products as a safer alternative. Propylene glycol antifreeze provides the same all-weather protection along with low toxicity and biodegradability. In preparing your car for winter, pay attention to the type of antifreeze you are putting in it. Is it safe?

Practicing good stewardship

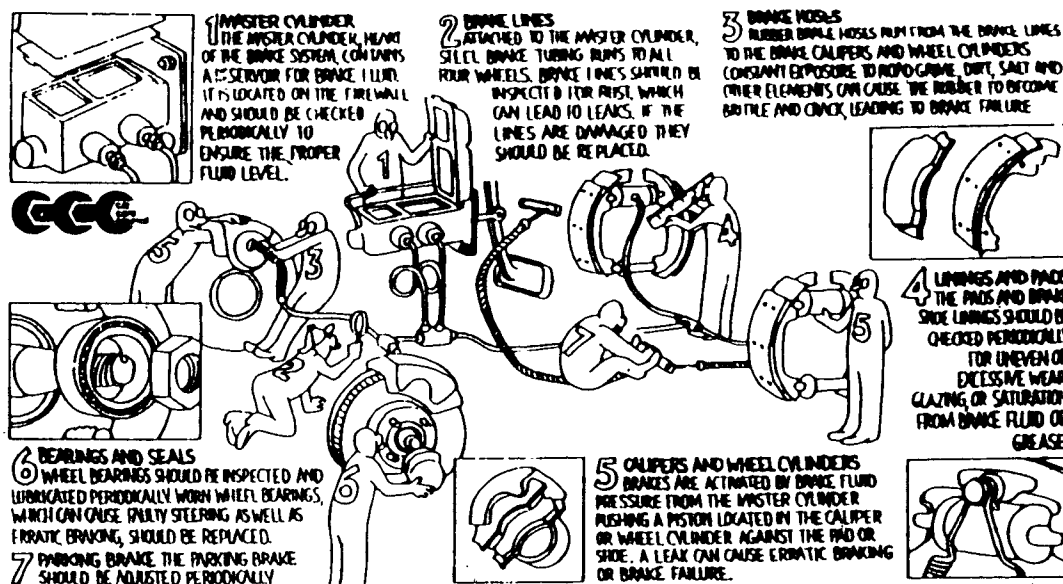

Whether you use conventional petroleum products or synthetic lubricants, be sure to properly dispose of used motor oil. Nearly every community provides recycling centers or facilities for disposing of hazardous chemicals, including used motor oil.

For more information on the environmental benefits of synthetic motor oils and a free AMSOIL product catalog, call 1-800-777-8491.

Short-trip driving and stop-and-go traffic, which most drivers today experience on a regular basis, take their toll on engines. The best way to counteract such severe wear and tear is a comprehensive maintenance program, regularly scheduled servicing and quality products under the hood.

hoses should be checked every six months for leaks and replaced every four years regardless of appearance.

Heater leaks

Leaks can occur in the heater core or heater control valve. A liquid sealant can be used, but more often than not, the heating-system units will have to be replaced.

Radiator leaks

The most common causes of radiator leaks are loose petcocks or plugs. Simply tightening these will fix the problem. An inadequate seal on the radiator cap also can cause a radiator to leak. Periodically check the seal for cracks and the metal cap for rust. A faulty radiator cap will not fully pressurize the remaining coolant.

White stains point to a more serious problem. These stains indicate coolant reacting with metal parts. Pouring liquid sealant may fix the problem, but usually, the radiator needs to be replaced or repaired.

Engine leaks

Leaks in the engine block occur where there is a bolted housing, like the thermostat or water-pump housing. You should inspect for leaks in the block's drain plugs and in the core plugs. These plugs are covered by metal discs, and if these discs corrode or loosen, coolant can leak from the block.

Gates advises that if leaking continues after you have inspected everything mentioned above, then the coolant leak is probably internal. This can be confirmed by looking for oil in the coolant, exhaust system or transmission fluid. A visual check of the coolant will reveal the presence of oil, but for exhaust and transmission, inspection must be performed using sophisticated equipment.

In each case, internal leaks can result in cracked heads or blocks, blown head gaskets, and loose or damaged head bolts, all of which usually require major engine repair.

Preparing your car this autumn for winter driving is a good investment. Easy-to-perform preventative maintenance, like checking your car's cooling system, can save you the cost and inconvenience of a breakdown.

Winter can be tough on car finish

Although autumn has just begun, it's not too early to start thinking about winter and how it affects your vehicle. Snow, rain, ice, road salt and gravel — all can contribute to the deterioration of even today's durable finishes. Yet, there are some simple things you can do to help protect your vehicle's paint this winter and throughout the year.

"Caring for your vehicle's paint is definitely a good investment," says Bill Wicklund of Wicklund's CARSTAR Collision. "A well-maintained finish will be a big plus when you sell or trade a vehicle. More importantly, the paint is designed to help protect the sheet-metal parts from rusting away, which could result in a safety problem."

According to Wicklund, one of the best ways to protect your vehicle's finish is to park it in a garage, out of the elements, whenever possible. If you do have to park outdoors in the winter, don't use an ice scraper on anything but the windows; you could damage the finish trying to scrape snow or ice off painted surfaces.

Clark Plucinski of BCP Autobody, College Park, Md., says gravel used to improve traction on slippery roads also can damage a vehicle's finish. "You should slow down not only to avoid losing control of your vehicle, but also to reduce the amount of gravel you're kicking up onto your vehicle and the vehicles behind you," Plucinski recommends. "Stay far enough back from the vehicle in front of you that you're not driving into a spray of gravel."

Plucinski says road gravel and grime should be rinsed from the vehicle as often as possible. Other ways to protect your vehicle's finish throughout the year include:

- Avoid parking in direct sunlight, particularly in the summer. Parking in a garage or shady area is almost always better, but also try to avoid parking under trees that may drip sap onto your vehicle.

- Remove any tree sap, bird droppings, gasoline or other harsh materials from your vehicle's finish as quickly as possible.

- Wash the vehicle when it is cool and parked out of direct sunlight. Wet it down thoroughly, then wash using warm water, a clean, soft wash mitt or sponge, and a car-wash soap. Never wash any panel unless it is thoroughly wet. Start with the roof, and work your way down and around, rinsing each section as you finish. To rinse, take the nozzle off the hose, and just let the water flow freely over the entire car. Dry it with a clean chamois or soft towel.

- Wax your vehicle at least twice a year. Wax only when the vehicle is clean and cool. Having it in a garage or enclosed area will help prevent dirt and dust from blowing onto the finish while waxing. Use a high-quality car wax, apply it with a wax applicator, and remove it with a clean, soft cloth.

If part of your vehicle needs repainting because of vandalism or an accident, choose a repair business carefully. Poor paintwork may not affect the safety of your vehicle, but it is likely to have a big impact on its resale value.

In choosing a repair and painting business, look for evidence that the technicians have been properly trained in paint matching and application. Most paint manufacturers offer technician training in the proper use of their products. I-CAR®, the leading technical training organization in the collision repair industry, also offers refinishing and detailing courses.

"These courses help us know how to tint paint for a good color match and also how to prepare the vehicle and apply the paint properly," Wicklund says.

Put safety first when jump-starting

How much do you know about your car? Each year, thousands of Americans suffer serious eye injuries or blindness because they don't know the proper procedure for jump-starting a dead car battery. Take this test, courtesy of Prevent Blindness America™, and find out how much you know about auto-battery safety.

1. Most batteries in today's cars are called "maintenance-free," which means they don't require regular checkups.

True

False

2. Motorists should own a set of jumper cables tested and approved by the Society of Automotive Engineers (SAE).

3. All you need to jump-start a vehicle with a dead battery is a set of jumper cables.

True

4. Jump-starting a dead car battery is simple if you know the proper and safe procedures.

True

5. Never clamp the negative cable to the negative post of the dead battery.

6. If battery acid comes in contact with your eye, seek medical attention immediately.

True

7. In a vehicle-battery explosion, flying battery fragments can cause serious eye injuries or blindness.

8. Wearing sunglasses or a pair of regular eyeglasses is enough protection when jump-starting a disabled car.

True

False

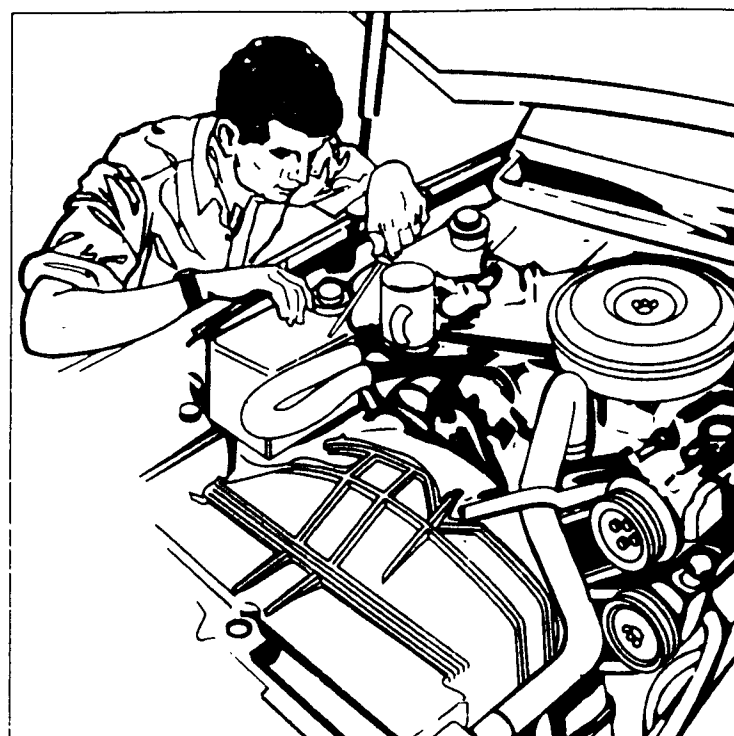

Answers

1. False — There is no such thing as a "maintenance-free" battery. Battery posts may still corrode, and battery cases may still crack, especially during the winter. Preventive maintenance is your best defense against vehicle failure. Prevent Blindness recommends that motorists check car batteries before winter sets in or, in the warmer climates, before the summer sizzles.

2. True — Jumper cables tested and approved by the SAE mean the cables meet the most stringent safety standards. Jumper cables that are not in good condition actually can be dangerous to the person jump-starting the car. Damaged cables may produce sparks, which can lead to battery explosion. Purchase cables that are at least 12 feet long and color-coded. Look for the SAE symbol on the label.

3. False — In addition to jumper cables, every car should have the following essentials for jump-starting: splashproof safety goggles for eye protection, flashlight and step-by-step guide for jump-starting a car.

4. True — The best way to ensure that you are following the proper procedures is to have the jump-start instructions handy in the car. Store the directions where you can find them easily, like under the hood, in your glove compartment or with the jumper cables.

5. True — This is a sure way to cause a spark, which can lead to battery explosion. All batteries produce hydrogen and oxygen gases. If the hydrogen gas comes into contact with a spark, the battery can explode, sending pieces of the battery and acid flying. You should clamp the last connection to a good ground in the disabled car, like the engine block, car frame or other unpainted metallic surface.

6. False — The injured motorist should flush the affected eye with the first drinkable liquid handy, like water, milk, soft drinks or juice. The longer you wait, the greater the chances of a serious eye injury. Flush the eye for at least 15 minutes before seeking emergency medical attention.

7. True — However, a battery also contains sulfuric acid, which can burn through clothing. In an explosion, the acid is as dangerous to the eyes as the battery pieces, because it can severely burn the delicate eye tissue.

8. False — Eyeglasses that are not made of polycarbonate (the most impact-resistant material available) can crack or break easily. Regular glasses also cannot protect your eyes from acid that can enter from the side. That's why Prevent Blindness recommends using splashproof safety goggles (designed for occupational use and marked with a Z87 logo) made with a polycarbonate lens when jump-starting.

Cars will be teenagers when the century turns

How long will a car or truck last?

There's a new answer to that question, according to an analysis just released by the Motor & Equipment Manufacturers Association (MEMA). MEMA has developed a new measurement for the Expected Useful Vehicle Life (EUVL) of a personal vehicle.

By the year 2000, a new car's EUVL will be just less than 15 years if current trends continue, according to Frank Hampshire, director of research at MEMA.

Improvements in quality and technology have added about 1-1/2 months to the useful life span of a car or truck each model year, meaning one complete additional year of usefulness every eight years.

"Although the observed data fluctuate a bit, fitting a trend line to the data makes the point clear: Cars today definitely last longer than they used to," says Hampshire. "This has major implications not only for our industry's vehicle makers and their suppliers, but also for the aftermarket that services and maintains those cars and trucks."

Better new cars mean fewer trips to the car dealership.

Phones

road, whether it's dialing a cellular phone or talking to the kids in the backseat, puts the driver at greater risk for an accident," says Jayna Neagle of the I.I.I.

According to the institute, car phones with hands-free microphones are the safest for drivers to utilize. If drivers do not have this type of phone, the I.I.I. advises the following:

- Keep the phone in an easily accessible location.
- Use a phone with pre-programmed dialing to minimize eye distraction.
- Pull over to the side of the road if you have to make a phone call.
- End conversations and let voice mail answer incoming calls if traffic becomes heavy.

Car phones tend to make people feel safe and secure, especially on the open road. However, don't let your guard down in light traffic, cautions Neagle. "You're not sitting in your kitchen chatting on the phone with a friend," she says. "You're on the road, where swift reflexes and crucial judgments are needed every minute."

Lights

the brake fluid in the master cylinder has dropped below a specified level.

First, check to see if your emergency brake is applied. If it's not, then slow down, and pull off the road. Find a safe place to test your brakes by starting and stopping. If you judge your brakes are still operating adequately, drive to the nearest dealer or repair shop. If the brakes are not adequate, have your car towed in to be repaired.

There are only two reasons why brake fluid in your master cylinder should go down. The first is that the brake-fluid level recedes during normal brake-lining wear. The other, more dangerous reason is that fluid is leaking out of the brake system.

To prevent the brake-fluid light from coming on, and ultimately brake failure, inspect hose and hose couplings for leaks, surface cracking, scuffing or worn spots. If any of these conditions exist, replace the faulty part or parts immediately.

MALFUNCTION INDICATOR LIGHT

This light, also known as the "service engine soon" light, indicates that there is a problem somewhere in the fuel system, ignition system, automatic-transmission electrical system or emission system. Although most of the time your vehicle may be driveable, proceed immediately to a dealer or repair shop.

A variety of circumstances can cause a problem in any one of these systems. The problem can range from having no fuel left in the gas tank to having holes in the exhaust.

Continued operation of your vehicle with the malfunction indicator light on can lead to poor driveability, reduced fuel economy and possible long-term damage to your engine.

warns Gates.

To prevent the engine malfunction light from appearing, routinely have your car serviced as recommended by your operator's manual.

Always remember to pay close attention to your car's in-dash warning lights. These lights not only tell you a lot about how your car is running, but they can alert you to potential problems.

If one of the warning lights appear, follow the above instructions to ensure your safety and protect the car.

By inspecting and replacing your vehicle's worn parts, you can successively prevent many headaches and high repair bills.

ABS

prevent front-wheel lock. The driver should apply the brake pedal with just enough force to stop the vehicle without locking the front wheels. The driver then can maintain steering control while rear-wheel ABS prevents the vehicle from skidding sideways.

Once drivers learn to "brake and steer," they're halfway there. It is just as important for drivers to understand that ABS technology has limitations and cannot replace safe driving practices.

"Drivers sometimes think the new technology allows them to ignore dangerous driving conditions," says Kitchin. "There's no substitute for safe driving, especially in bad weather."
